

275.02 Transport technologies (in railway transport)

The Bachelor of Transport Technologies is an independent profession with its own professional-specific tools and skills. He / She is trained to perform work in the transport departments of undertakings, ensuring the functioning and interaction of all modes of transport, the organization of quality customer service with their provision of a wide range of services.

While directing transport process, the bachelor justifies and makes decisions in typical situations, using modern information technology, scientific achievements in the field of transport and methods and forms of management; conducts a constant search for new opportunities, attracts and uses resources from various sources to solve problems, seeking to improve the efficiency of transportation.

The master is a specialist in the organization of transportation and operation of railway transport competent to solve the following tasks:

- organize efficient transport and technological schemes of freight delivery;
- ensure the safety of traffic units in different conditions;
- comprehensively assess the effectiveness of the functioning of traffic management systems;
- assess the environmental safety of transport systems;
- forecast the development of transport systems;
- perform scientific and design works to improve the functioning and development of transport systems.